

SAFETY IS NO ACCIDENT

Photographing the Crash Scene

When faced with a crash scene, keep in mind that photography is NOT your top priority. Focus on the following before taking pictures:

- Protect the scene: Flashers and warning triangles.
- Notify authorities and your manager or corporate office.
- Render aid to the limit of your training.

Take photographs of the vehicles

- Take photos of each vehicle, all sides, close ups of damage etc.
- “No damage” may be important too... take photos.
- Take photos of license plates on other vehicles.

Take photographs of the scene

- Take photos that will help reconstruct the accident scene later.
- Step back far enough to capture the scene.
- Take photos of street signs, stoplights, etc.
- DO NOT take photos of injured persons.

TRIVIA QUESTION OF THE MONTH

Congrats to Carl Butler who correctly answered the May trivia question.

June Question

According to the article on the front page of this newsletter...when taking photos at an accident scene...what should you avoid taking photos of?

Drink up!

Our body depends on water to survive. Every cell, tissue, and organ in your body needs water to work correctly. For example, your body uses water to maintain its temperature, remove waste, and lubricate joints. Water is needed for good health.

A reasonable goal is for the average person to drink 6 to 8, 8 ounce glasses of water a day. Some people might require a little more, some a little less. So stay hydrated and drink up this Summer!
